“ Aunt Pearl loved her family. I remember going over to the big yellow house on the corner seeing her and Uncle Ernest. When I had my son she wanted to keep him. She loved babies. She definitely was very proud of her grand babies. I know it's a reunion going on. I know you'll be dancing and having a good time. My prayers and heartfelt condolences to the family, praying for strength. Love you all.

“ I feel my mother's influence in the way I move through life every day. She was direct, honest, and never sugarcoated anything. She used to say, "It doesn't cost nothing to be nice," and I carry that with me in how I treat people. But she also made sure I understood—kindness is not weakness. She stood firm in who she was. That balance she lived by—being good to others while standing on business—is something I hold onto and try to live out in my own way. R.I.P. Mom 🕊️

“ Within the sorrow of my heart, my mind recalls memories that comfort me.
It shan't be told to no one, my pain & sorrow will only last till tomorrow.
Decades of sunrises & sunsets have shown themselves to me.
Tears spring forth from those memories. Be still my heart!
Let not sorrow define mother's memories.
Tears abound! To not hear her scolding me is the hardest thing I do endure.
Love demands correction. When that is lost, will my mind seek my mother's reflection? That would be the greatest gift of all to me. ❤️
